Capitalism Not Dead Yet
Mr. Touby Sobbed
No Kowtow, Says Kang
Teh
Book by Lindbergh, Sr.
By Arthur Brisbane

GEORGE H. MAINES announced "Senator State Long and Norman Thomas debate at Mecca Temple in New York city; subject, 'Capitalism is Doomed and Cannot Now Be Saved by a Redistribution of Wealth.'" Thomas taking affirmative, Long negative, defending capitalism.

Norman Thomas may convince his audience, but history will take Senator Long's side. Military feudalism, having ruled Europe for many centuries, gave way to what is called "Industrial and capitalist feudalism." Such systems of government do not rise and fall quickly.

Long after today's little NRA, CWA, RFC and other alphabetically complicated and remedies are forgotten, government of the world by modern feudalism of capitalist and industrial intelligence will continue. This century will not see the end of it.

The world is always ruled by intelligence and power. Ruler-ship resided once in the heavy club of the strongest, most intelligent savage, and then passed to organized government by kings and armies.

Just now, power is in accumulated dollars and in industrial science and organization. It may pass eventually to what is vaguely called "the general intelligence and the rights of man." But that is a long way off.

In Illinois, Mr. Roger Touby, called "Terrible Touby," ruler of the underworld, expert kidnaper, goes to jail under a 99-year sentence, with 15 automobile loads of policemen accompanying him to the prison gates.

The super-gangster, head bowed, shoulders sagging, leans in his cot, sob in his throat. "He is terrible."

It is terrible, of course. Ninety-nine years in jail, even though you may come out, as Touby may, at the end of some 30 years, is a long time.

But kidnapping, ransoming men's eyes and mouth with adhesive tape, tying their wrists and ankles with wire, torturing their relatives with anxiety, is also "terrible." It would hardly do to have all the "terribleness" on one side of the fence.

In California, the people get tired of kidnapping, and especially of torture, so two men that kidnapped and used burning paper to extort money will be hanged by the neck until they are dead. They, doubtless, think it is terrible, and it is.

The new Emperor of Manchuria, Kang Teh, succeeds the throne declaring that everything is happening in accordance with the "will of Heaven," thanking "our neighbor, Japan," for Japanese help in "suppressing bandits and other threatening elements."

He put his hand solemnly upon the flag of the great Manchurian empire, and bade farewell to that god humbly as he left his presence.

You would not want a more impressive ceremony, the young emperor wearing a long robe of jet-black fur, golden-yellow sash, with the imperial vest, an ermine, and a high black head cover. Crowns are not worn by Mongolian rulers.

This is Kang Teh's thing inauguration as emperor, in China, shown out twice, now in Manchuria.

Connecticut Plans to Battle Floods
New Haven, Ct., March 2 (AP)—Precipitations against flood conditions in southern Connecticut during the next 24 hours were taken today by State and municipal authorities as they watched down the drifts left by February's record snowfall.

The State Highway Department issued a statement, saying: "Who do not know whether or not we shall be able to entirely avoid flood conditions along the highways."

BRIDE PINS HER HOPE ON ROSE

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Two women desperately fighting for their men, will be brought into closer communion when Norma Brighton, Natick girl bride, calls on Rose Kneller, Abe Faber's fiancée, as an alibi witness for her defense should the police attempt to involve her in the Fitchburg murder.

Though Norma's testimony may send the Technology Jockey graduate to the electric chair, the bright-eyed daughter of a retired minister will look to her sweetheart to save her from any possible jail sentence.

"Faber is lying to save his skin," Norma declared as she cuddled her little figure, newly clad in a spring frock, in an easy chair in the living-room of her father's summer cottage.

"He knows I never went to Fitchburg with him and the boys—that I knew nothing of their criminal activities... and his sweetheart knows it, too! Why, the very night he spoke of, he and I went to the movies. On the particular night of the Fitchburg happening, Rose and I went to the movie in Natick and I know several people saw me if they be good enough to come forward and say so."

"I had the smaller car and many times, Rose and I drove around together or went to the movies when the boys were busy and went off by themselves; although I wasn't left alone too often."

Whale Cut in Two by Liner Bremen

New York, March 2 (INS)—The liner Bremen, 15,000 gross tons, was steaming along at 26 knots an hour.

The whale, 100 gross tons, was taking a snore, rocking gently on the moonlit Atlantic.

So they met, and Mr. Whale went into a long, long sleep. He was, in fact, cut in two.

The story of the collision off the Grand Banks was related today when the Bremen docked with 712 thrilled passengers.

Irving Millen Tells How Gang Killed

SWEETHEART ROSE GIVES UP MURDER LOOT, ARRESTED

Other Stories, Pictures on Pages 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8 and 10

The State police net snared another pretty girl today in the wake of the Millen-Faber gang's ruthless murders and robberies.

Rose Kneller, 23, of Dorchester, dark-haired sweetheart of the talkative Abe Faber, alleged brains of the trio of machine gun gangsters, was arrested on a charge of receiving stolen property and temporarily held without bail.

Her arrest came abruptly within an hour of the official announcement that she was the mystery woman who surrendered $3580 in blood money to Gen. Daniel Needham, state police head, last night.

The surrendered money is suspected by police of being Faber's share of the $14,500 loot of the Needham Trust Co. robbery, during which two policemen were slain. Miss Kneller, plied with questions by state detectives, refused all information.

ROSE WAS NORMA'S BRIDESMAID

Rose was bridesmaid at Norma Brighton's wedding to Merton Millen and new developments indicated that bride and bridesmaid would stand trial together—for the State has lost its sympathy with Norma. It was disclosed today, and will seek her indictment and trial as an accessory to the Needham crime, although she is still at liberty in $1000 bail as a material witness.

The arrest of Rose was the seventh to date in the appalling expose of a felonious orgy without precedent in the Commonwealth's records. And there are several more arrests to be made, the Boston Evening American learned, in connection with the disposal of loot gained at the cost of at least four lives.

Faber and Merton and Irving Millen are charged with murder; Rose, with receiving stolen property; Norma is held as a material witness, and the two Messengers, Saul and George, also are material witnesses.

MURDER IS A LAUGH FOR IRVY

Rose was arrested... the State moved for Norma's indictment... Merton Millen penned a pouring "Darling Kittens" letter to the bride who had forsaken him... and Irving Millen recounted what a hearty laugh he enjoyed when two "damn fool cops" were murdered.

Kaleidoscopic, bizarre, macabre were the developments today against the blood-spattered wreckage of the Millen-Faber pact in crime as the State shoved its trio of young male members a bit closer to the fired chair—and reached out for its women.

Strangest of all was the development encompassing the dark-haired, sober-minded Rose Kneller—a vivid contrast in temperament to the smiling, complacent Norma.

She met Mr. Needham last night and turned the alleged bank loot over to him in the presence of an attorney, John Daly. Needham didn't question her but asked her to appear at the State House for questioning today.

She appeared shortly before 1 o'clock and in Gen. Needham's office, with Daly present, was questioned by State Detectives John Stokes, Michael Fleming and Joe Ferraro.

At four passed during which nothing of what was transpiring behind the closed door leaked out. Then Lieut. Stokes stepped out.

Refuses to Tell How She Got Money

"Rose Kneller has been arrested for receiving stolen property," he announced.

"The girl does not tell us anything, she refused to say how she came into possession of the money she gave up, when or from whom it was received. She has refused to discuss her friendship with members of the gang. The charge on which she is held is a felony. At present she is being held here without trial. It will be up to Dist. Atty. Edmund R. Dwyer as to her disposition. Rose Kneller's home is in Melrose, 23, Dorchester, but recently she has been living with Faber's parents Mr. and Mrs. Philip Faber in Blue Hill ave. Detectives were reluctant to discuss Continued on Page 8, Column 1

FABER'S FANCEE ARRESTED AFTER GIVING CASH TO POLICE

ROSE KNELLAR IS HELD FOR RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS

Rose Knellar, Dorchester sweetheart of Abe Faber, was arrested today on a charge of receiving stolen goods after Gen. Dan McNeenham, state police head, revealed that she was the "mystery woman" who last night turned over $3500 of allegedly "hot" money to police.

McNeenham said the $3500 was placed in his hands by Miss Knellar, herself, in the presence of her attorney, in a Washington at jewelry store. The money, he said, was in a newspaper wrapped package and in a tin box. The package held $500. The box contained the rest.

The store in which the money turnover was made is the one in which Miss Knellar has been employed, Gen. McNeenham declared. It is also, he said, the store where Morton Miller purchased the engagement ring which he gave to his wife, Mrs. Norma Brighton Miller.

Two months ago, a robbery took place in this same store, police asserted.

"Abe, John Daly of 208 Washington st., called me here at my office last night, told me he had a client named Rose Knellar, said he was a civil lawyer with no experience in criminal practice, but that he would like to have me see him at once."

"I went down to the office of the Sager Brothers' jewelry store, at 218 Washington st., at 7:30 last night."

"Faber, another lawyer, Abe, Samuel Alexander, were there with Miss Knellar."

"Mr. Daly said he had instructed Miss Knellar not to talk, she handed over to me a bundle which she had in her hands. I had no conversation with her. She agreed to come to my office today with her attorney and I am waiting for her now."

"After opening the bundle, I found $500 wrapped in newspaper and brown wrapping paper, bound with an elastic. The balance of the money totaling $3500 in all, was in a metal box, also wrapped up in brown paper."

"We have not yet learned from Miss Knellar how long she had the money, who gave it to her or where it was kept. We will determine all that during our questioning of her today."

"The counting of the money delayed my appearance at a meeting of the Lynn American Legion last night, and I mentioned the matter of the money without going into details. It was agreed that what I did say last night would be in evidence."

Murton Writes of His Love to 'Kitten'

By a Staff Correspondent

New York, March 2.—Thinking constantly of his bride, Merion Murton, Dorchester youth, accused of the orgy of bank banditry and murder, wrote today to Norma for the first time since his arrest Sunday.

The letter follows:

"My darling:
This is the first time that I have had a chance to write to you since they took us away from each other last Sunday. You don't know how much I am missing you while I am here. Thinking of you just gets you and shows your heart front. I hope you are looking well and happy to keep smiling. I know you will stick by me to the end. If I could only see you or if I could only do something for you, but right now I can't. Never mind, Kitten, I will be going back to Boston soon and I will be able to see you then. I can hardly wait to get there. But keep smiling, dear, to the end. Your darling Murton, P. R. I hope, sends his sympathy and regards."

Bandits' Blood-Red Mask and Death Gun

GEN. NEEDHAM
Lieut. F. Stokes of the state police today donned the red mask the Milken-Faber gang had ready for any emergency. Lieut. F. Stokes of the state police brought the mask and the Milken-Faber arsenal back from Washington and looked on as Needham tried the various devices. The gun leaning in the suitcase is the ingenious death-dealer designed by the gang to silence its fatal shots. The weapon has a long pipe for a barrel and bullets fired from it cannot be identified for they are not marked by the pipe. (Boston American photo.)

A Challenge to Liberty

THE "New Deal" would be vastly more heartening if we were assured that the extension of governmental activity was primarily intended to regulate private enterprise to keep it moving along socially desirable lines of government.

Any general effort on the part of government to substitute bureaucracy for private initiative suggests a growing army of tax-eaters and partisans of the group in office.

In judging the proper changing balance between freedom and government control, the public should clearly visualize the momentous issues at stake.

Many of the changes are made in the name of liberalism, yet the founder of the Democratic party, Thomas Jefferson, contended that government is best which governs least.

THOMAS N. CARVER, professor emeritus of Harvard University, points out that the rise of federal intervention in economic affairs means a growth of AUTHORITARIANISM, not of LIBERALISM.

In this struggle, Professor Carver thinks that the recent battle for the freedom of the press was highly necessary—differing from General Hugh S. Johnson's characterization of the campaign as one against a "synthetic dead cat."

"Liberals," Mr. Carver points out, in the nation's business, "have been, for a hundred and fifty years, struggling for greater freedom and less government control. Authoritarians have struggled for more government control. It may look, at present, as though the authoritarians were in the saddle and liberalism were either dead or on the defensive. If the authoritarians are really in a position of dominance, we shall see a gradual extension of government control over industry in general, and probably also over education, the press and even religion. At least, there is no other government that is undertaking to manage the industries of its people without trying also to manage or control education, the press and religion."

THE economist is not opposed to more government control where it appears necessary, but he insists that administration policies be correctly labelled, not misbranded, so that the American people can render an informed verdict at the ballot boxes.

In a period when it is popular for public officers to ask for blank check authority, it is timely for the American people to take an inventory of their liberties, and to determine which ones deserve to be stoutly defended.

There must be no unconscious drift into a new order!

IRVING SCORNS POLICE; BRAGS OF HOLDUP KILLINGS

COOL AND CALM AS HE BOASTS OF CRIMES

Merton Holds Silence as He Listens to Brother's Tale

By ARTHUR J. QUINN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

New York, March 2—Irving Miller has confessed to New York detectives that he was the machine gun killer of Patrolman Harold MacLeod, Needham police officer.

He has named Abe Faber and his brother Merton as his associates in the robbery of $12,000—the bank officials counted their loss at $15,501.

He said it was probably Merton who killed the second police officer, Frank Haddock, a quarter of a mile from the scene of the first murder.

GRILLED FOUR HOURS
The confession made in a tone and manner that was baffling to a law abiding citizen discussing with his friends a rare musical show was obtained by Lieut. Charles Eason and Deputy Edmund O'Brien and John Fitzsimmons.

The confession was obtained from Irving Miller at the conclusion of a four hour grilling of both Irving and Merton.

It came out of a clear sky as the three officers were in the midst of kidding Irving about wounds that he had inflicted on his head last Sunday afternoon in the Hotel Lincoln when the Miller brothers drove in an attempt to shoot their way to freedom.

MERTON HOLDS SILENCE
Elated over the drawing of the confession from Irving police admitted that they were a bit disappointed that they did not have the same luck with Merton. Merton has not confessed to the New York authorities. He has emphatically denied to them that he has made any confession to anyone.

Irving confessed in detail to the part he and others played in the Worcester bank holdup and the slaying of the two officers.

He has confessed that he, Abe Faber and his brother Merton held up and robbed the Fox Theater in Worcester, of $2000, and that during this robbery he took a gun from a Worcester police officer, now dead.

ADMITS LYNN JOB
He has admitted that he took part in Paramount Theater holdup in Lynn, where an aged watchman was murdered, and for which two other men were arrested and tried, but he declined to go into details concerning his movements during that robbery and murder.

He involved Faber and his brother Merton in this, but refused to name the man who fired the fatal shot into the watchman's body. He indirectly admitted that he and the gang had taken part in the Wollaston and Brookline bank thefts, by saying:

"I'll discuss the details of these jobs with the State police when I get to Boston. I want to see whether we had anything to do with them or not."

He admitted that he, his brother and Abe Faber were the killers of Charles Clark, of Fitchburg. He declined to go into details about that killing, but said that it was Faber's story of the affair.

"Well, that's right, except I won't put Norma in it. I'm going to keep her out of everything."

NO PITY FROM IRVING
The confession was told to the three detectives in a cold, deliberate manner. There was not a single word uttered by this youth, just 29 years old, that indicated that he had any remorse for the numerous victims that he and his gang shot and left to die in streets in at least three separate cities.

His attitude was one of scorn rather than pity. He knocked Officer McLeod a (G—D—) for not holding him down a tree. And then he calmly added a live Continued on Page 4, Column 1

Gloria's Mate Denies Rift

London, March 2 (AP)—Michael Farmer today added his denial to that of his wife, Gloria's, saying, "I am not a married man."

Farmer admitted that he was caught off his guard by her remarks and disclosed that he telephoned his actress wife in Hollywood "just to make sure."

"She assured me there was nothing in the story," said the actor, beaming his Irish smile. "I couldn't believe it, but I telephoned to make sure."

Farmer expects to return to Hollywood in three or four weeks. He has been abroad for a month waiting the couple's separation—Gloria's one, his own and one adopted.

They are attending school in Switzerland and remain in Europe the year round. Farmer's "separation" from his wife, he explained, was an annual affair merely to see the youngsters.

Study of Bandit's Bride -- Who Craved for Adventure

In this charming study of Mrs. Norma Miller, it is obvious that she has attained that "charm and poise" she so eagerly desired to possess in order that "Mert" would be proud of her. To that end, she sought advice from a New York personality expert. But the girl's greater urge was a craving for thrills and adventure. Merton Miller said that that yearning of her flaming youth in tragic measure. (Boston American photo.)

Norma's Mother Shoulders Blame For Daughter's Predicament

By DEBBY DOYLE

A divided home, a father who was too severe in some respects and too indulgent in others and a mother who, of necessity, could be but a part-time parent. These were contributing factors, according to her mother, in putting Mrs. Norma, Brighton Mill, in the country's headlines as the wife of one of three youths charged with the most ruthless series of murders and robberies in Massachusetts' history.

The mother, Mrs. Margaret Brighton, whose collapse at Dedham Court when she overheard false predictions as to Norma's probable fate secured her several days' release from her duties at the State Infirmary, was interviewed at the home of the Rev. John Cummings, chaplain at the infirmary and her pastor.

BLAME DIVORCE
Her blue eyes were tragic but she was calm and cool as she discussed her 18-year-old daughter's background and her purpose to do everything in her power to aid her in this time.

"Norma," she said, "wouldn't be in this terrible predicament—she wouldn't be married to Merton Miller if her father had properly understood her and given her that affection which her ardent nature demanded. I don't like to speak of these things—I never have before—but that was one difficulty. (She was divorced from the Rev. Mr. Brighton in September, 1928, in Worcester superior court, having charged him with cruel and abusive treatment.)

"I loved that man. I worshipped him. I craved affection but he was cold and completely lacking in tenderness and sympathetic understanding.

"But, as I said, Norma would not now be married to Mert Miller if her father had been more tolerant and patient with her. She had quarreled with him and left home. She came to me and told me about it—that life at her father's house was impossible. She was never permitted to have young people in to visit her."

PLEADED WITH NORMA
"She was required to be home at 9 p. m. Mr. Brighton's methods of attempting to restrain her were absolutely demagogic and she was wrong one to use in dealing with a warm-natured, high-spirited, attractive girl. The papers seem to concentrate on Norma's beauty. Actually, the qualities that really attract people to her are her sweetness and fineness."

"When she informed me that she meant to marry Merton, whom I had met and assumed to be a well-bred, decent young man, I told her she was young to think of marriage and I pleaded with her to try to put up with things a while longer. But she was determined, and, realizing that nothing I could say would dissuade her, I gave her my blessing, if not my complete approval."

Mrs. Brighton spoke of her disappointment at this aspect of the romance between Norma and Robert Rogers, a senior at the Natick high school where the girl was a junior until her "elopement" with Miller.

The two were engaged, according to Mrs. Brighton, having become interested in each other during rehearsal for the school play, "Pygmalion and Galatea," in which they played the leading roles.

Rogers, son of a contractor, wrote to her, Mrs. Brighton said, in Miller and expressed hopes that it was just a temporary infatuation and reiterated his love for her. He is now employed as a filling station attendant in Natick, but is planning an artistic career. He is a graduate of the Natick Art School.

Although Mrs. Brighton is supposed to have seen her daughter in Dedham court for the first time since her marriage four months ago, she revealed yesterday that she visited her at the East Natick home of her father and stepmother Tuesday night.

DENIES GANG WORK
"I asked her, then, if she had known anything about the murders and crimes of which Merton was accused and she said, 'No, nothing that would implicate me.' She assured me she loved Mert, that he was always good to her and that he had a 'bad temper.' Merton's mother really loved my girl and used to say Mert was lucky to get such a fine, lovely girl."

Referring to Abraham Faber, who has "told all" to the police, even being so unkind as to insist that Norma was "one of the gang," Mrs. Brighton recalled that "Norma never cared for Faber because she knew that he had a bad influence over Merton."

ONE-DAY BRIDE MME. STAVISKY ALL DONE WITH MARRIAGE HELD IN PARIS SCANDAL

Mrs. Horton Obtains Divorce; Claims Her Husband Is Thief

Mrs. Dell Wagner Horton, pretty 21-year-old graduate of fashionable Prince school, today was granted a divorce from Guy Horton, of South Boston, by Judge Joseph B. McCool in Suffolk Probate court.

Mrs. Horton, who lives at 65 St. Germaine st., in the Back Bay, charged desertion. She said that there was only a one-day marriage. She met Horton at a party when she was 18, she testified, and a week later they eloped to Toledo. The day after their marriage, her husband deserted her in Detroit, she said, but meanwhile she had learned that he was an automobile thief who had been in prison. She never saw him again, she added.

Mrs. Marjorie Erskine, formerly of Arlington but now of Charles River rd., Brockton, was granted a divorce from Frank J. Erskine, of West Bridgewater, on grounds of cruel and abusive conduct. She was granted the custody of her five-year-old daughter, Loraine, and was awarded $100 cost and fees and $150 per week. She was represented by Atty. George Alpert, while Atty. Elias Shamon represented Mrs. Horton.

Paul E. Beede, of Haverly st., Dorchester, was granted an annulment of his marriage to Anna M. Beede. He testified that she went through a secret marriage ceremony with him at Portsmouth, N. H., in 1928 only because she did not want to hurt his feelings by telling him that she would never be his wife. Her sister, Mrs. Evelyn Kerry, of East 4th st., South Boston, corroborated the testimony.

Widow of Swindler Is Charged With Complicity

Paris, March 2 (INS)—A new sensation marked the 40-million-dollar Stavisky (Rothschild scandal) when Mme. Alexandra Stavisky, wife of the arch-swindler, was arrested and jailed today for complicity in the affair.

Mme. Stavisky was guarded by French police, who questioned her on the affairs of her husband, head of the Bavarian municipal pawnshop, the failure of which brought a government crisis in France and caused bloody riots in Paris a month ago. Stavisky killed himself as police were about to arrest him.

Arrest of Mme. Stavisky followed the mysterious reappearance of missing stubs of 800 checks paid out by Stavisky. These stubs are regarded as vitally important evidence.

The stubs, it was revealed, have been passed from person to person during the last two months, the police apparently never knowing where they were. The parliamentary commission investigating the case demanded that Keeper of the Seals Henry Coudan produce the stubs. He said they had disappeared.

Today, however, Minister of the Interior Albert Sarraut announced he had recovered the stubs. The names of the person who surrendered the stubs was kept secret. The resolution must be taken from Mme. Stavisky.

Praise Sought for Boston Police

A resolute commendation of the Boston police for their part in the apprehension of Abraham Faber and the Miller brothers has been filed with the clerk of the Senate by Sen. Edward C. Carroll, of South Boston. The resolution must be considered by the committee on rules.

MERTON PENS LOVE NOTE TO BRIDE FROM N. Y. PRISON CELL

HOLDS TO SILENCE DESPITE GRILL BY N. Y. POLICE

By ARTHUR J. QUINN

oward is a lot better than a dead heart. As he uttered those two sentences the two detectives all declared "we felt like strangling him."

The officers described him as a youth whose veins are filled with ice water rather than the red blood of an American-born youth.

DIED IN A CAGE

"His veins are filled with ice water rather than blood. I've been in this police business for years. I've seen plenty of tough ones, but none like this guy. The three of us could have strangled him when he spoke the way he did about the officer," said Lieut. Charles Eason.

The confession was made to the officers after Irving had sat for four hours in a grilling cage in the seventh district prison at 33rd st. on the West Side.

Only once did he indicate that he had any sorrow for anyone. That sorrow—the police are doubtful of the sincerity of his remarks—was for his pal Faber's mother.

"Oh—oh. It's all of us can't get for that job. One of us has got to be saved. I'll take the 'trap' for everything if I can save either Faber or my brother—preferably Faber because of his mother."

Lieut. Eason quoted Irving.

"Why do you want to save Faber for his mother. What about your own mother?" asked Lieut. Eason. Irving had quick answer ready and it was the only answer he made during the entire four hours that might indicate that somewhere in his system a spark of sympathy actually existed.

SORRY FOR FABER

"Well, it's tough on my mother having two of us in this jam, but she has more than us. Mr. Faber has only him. He's the only kid in the world to her and I know she's crazy over him. And he's a good fellow, too. I like him."

Reminded that Faber had told police in detail the story that he and his brother Merton had played in their seven months' career of crime he said:

"Well, I don't care if he did. Maybe he couldn't help telling it. He was probably scared to death and didn't know what to do. But with these few sentences that indicated sympathy for at least one person Irving again assumed his bloodied attitude as he talked of the Needham and Pittsburg and Lynn murders.

He actually looks upon everyone who has fallen a victim of a bullet from guns held in the hands of the gang as a fool who should have known better. He seems convinced that they would have been wiser to comply with any demand the gang made upon them and that they would be better off as live cowards.

His reason for carrying on a career of banditry and slaughter of law-abiding citizens he said was "I wanted to be in the dough. I wanted an easy living. I didn't want to have to work all of the time."

SHOWS NO WORRIES
During his confession he coolly said:

"I knew we weren't going to get away with it all the time. I knew we were going to have to come to the drop sometime, but I didn't care."

He branded the act of state police officials allowing a state police radio broadcasting car to remain on exhibition at the auto show and at county fairs as "the craziest damn thing I ever heard of."

He sarcastically remarked: "It looked as easy a guy couldn't help wanting to get at the guns that we knew were in it."

FIGURES FAIL TO TALK
The claim of the officials of the Needham Trust Co. that the total amount of money stolen from the bank paying teller was $15,551 Irving said was incorrect.

But with these few sentences that indicated sympathy for at least one all we had when we got out of the bank was $15,000, the teller and I think the other fellow was the treasurer. He sat at a desk outside the office from where I shot him. The cop up to the right of the bank as I came in."

At one time during his confession he became quite quarrelsome when Lieut. Eason pointed out the folly of shooting the police officers this suggestion drawing the remark:

"Do you think that job was easy. You don't know how long it took to go over the whole thing before we could get away with it. Then this fool cop answered that larger alarm and I was in a tough spot. We all had to get out and I figured that the shooting was the only way to make the getaway."

Once when Lieut. Eason discussed the consequences that may result for the trio for their killings and plundering of banks and factory payrolls Irving coldly said:

NO FEAR OF CHAIR
"Hell you don't think I'm afraid of the chair do you? What's the difference if you die by electrocution or by falling from an airplane. What the hell does it amount to. We just like this now you're awake, now you're asleep. The chair doesn't scare me."

As Lieut. Eason began his questioning of Irving, Detectives O'Brien and Pittzmann worked for hours in an attempt to draw from Merton a similar confession. But he refused to talk.

The two men had been placed in two separate cages for their grilling.

As Irving was giving out his version of the crime career of the gang and seriously involving his brother, Merton was busy writing a letter to his wife Norma Brighton Miller, now with her father in Natick.

Finishing their questioning of Irving the police returned to Merton's cage and informed him that his brother had told the whole story of the Needham murders and robbery.

There was no indication by a facial expression that Merton was concerned over the announcement. He is the same cold blooded type as his younger brother. Nothing seems to concern him.

MERTON HOLDS SILENCE
"I don't care what he says. I don't care what anyone is saying. I won't talk, my counsel has told me to remain silent, and I am going to do just that. I'll talk to you about anything excepting the charges that have been made against me," he said.

In his letter to his bride he addressed her as "Dear Buddy."

He affectionately referred to her as "Darling Kitten," and advised her to "Grit your teeth, keep your head up, and keep smiling."

I'LL BE SEEING YOU
He assured her:

"I miss you more than anything else in the world, adding, I can hardly live without you; if you could only be near me now, I need you so much, more than ever before." And then he scribbled with his pencil, never mind, darling, I will be seeing you soon."

Happy Days Once for Norma, Mother

Mrs. Margaret Brighton and her daughter, Mrs. Norma Brighton Miller, on a New Brunswick beach where the Rev. Mr. Norman Brighton and his family used to spend their summers. After divorce had broken up the family, Mrs. Brighton and her young daughter continued to make occasional summer trips to beaches, choosing Nantasket as being convenient. And it was at Nantasket that "the prettiest girl at Natick high in 1933" met and fell in love with Merton Miller, who, with his brother, Irving, and Abraham Faber, seem to have been bent on making a bee-line for the electric chair.

The Free State president, born in New York of a Spanish father and an Irish mother, said:

"There is not so far as I know a single drop of Jewish blood in my veins."

"I do not want that disclaimer interpreted as an attack upon the Jews, but as there has been from opposition benches all this year-old physician has maintained since last Nov. 21 when tragedy upended the tranquility of her home. Dr. Wynneop gave terse answers to questions by her attorney.

Unable to walk, the defendant was carried to the witness stand in a chair with the jury excluded from the courtroom.

Roosevelt Asks Power to Bargain on Tariffs
Washington, March 2 (AP)—President Roosevelt today asked Congress for authority to modify tariff rates in negotiating commercial agreements with other nations.

The President, "to enter into executive commercial agreements with foreign nations; and in pursuance thereof within carefully guarded limits to modify existing duties and import restrictions in such a way as will benefit American agriculture and industry."

The President stated that the reasons for asking such power: First, he said, world trade has declined approximately 70 per cent from its 1929 volume. Second, our government is an increasing extent are "winning their share of international trade by negotiating reciprocal trade agreements."

"If American agricultural and industrial interests are to retain their deserved place in this trade," he asserted, "the American Government must be in a position to bargain for that place with other governments by rapid and decisive negotiation based upon a carefully considered program and to grant with discretion corresponding opportunities in the American market for foreign products supplementary to our own."

The tariff-bargaining experiment was proposed to Congress with assistance from the Democratic leaders of support but with a bitter partisan debate in prospect on the ancient political issue.

Dublin, March 2 (AP)—A positive denial that there is "a single drop" of Jewish blood in his veins was made today by President Eamon De Valera during debate in the Dail Eireann.

Norma Plans Love Duel in Court

By RUTH MUGGLESEKE

voice barely above a whisper—much the same manner as one would ask to "please pass the box of chocolates."

"Not at all," says her father. "Norma isn't afraid. She doesn't realize sufficiently to be afraid. She is still convinced, with a childishness that can't be explained, that the man—her husband—is innocent. She's fully cognizant that the electric chair awaits these boys, but she talks about the electric chair as if it were a piece of furniture."

Norma has planned her defense to her own satisfaction, and having done so, has dismissed the entire incident from her mind.

Two things, only, concern her. She keeps repeating—the only time that her voice has taken on the slightest tinge of awakening realization of seriousness—this one phrase:

"I keep seeing their bloody heads... their bloody heads... it was horrible... terrible... my stomach turns over at the very thought of it... I keep seeing their bloody heads... poor Mert."

And Norma tightens her face into a mass of wrinkles and frowns. The recurring sight, the names of the fatal New York Sunday Mirror, has prohibited the young girl from taking but little food. "I can't eat," she said, "my stomach curls up like the edges of a fried egg at the thought of it all."

Norma Waits for

Chance to See Husband

Norma will wait to see her husband when Boston detectives bring him and his "nerve-cracked" younger brother back from New York. Tomorrow, her father feared.

"And I'll not prevent the meeting," he continued. "I would rather she think that am standing in her way of doing the expected thing, although I wish I could prevent such a meeting."

If Norma misses her husband or has any regret for his present plight and the imminent fate that awaits him, she reveals nothing of any sorrow in her manner or actions.

She laughs at funny sayings and "witticisms."

She sends to a box of candy like a school-girl out on a half holiday. She says "yum, yum," after the first bite of the delicious and winches bristlingly at her spectator.

There is nothing in Norma's behavior—the kind a knowing public would expect of a gangster's bride. That is the unusual side of this story, that in some measure the gripping detail, the colorful angle that makes Norma Miller the center of the dramatically shifting events in this wholesale murder-syndicate, of which her 24-year-old husband was a member, according to his pal, Faber.

She laughed heartily when she learned that police who raided the apartment in Washington, where she and Mert remained temporarily, appraised her wardrobe found on the premises at $1000.

Seized Clothing

Cheap, Says Norma

"They do so much want to dress me up, don't they? Why all the clothes they found could be bought for less than $100."

"Why I'm shushing to have to tell you how cheap those things were. It embarrasses me to reveal how inexpensive they are. I'd much rather—be very glad to, if I could—tell you they cost $50 instead of 50 cents for a bracelet or a pair of earrings."

"Why the handkerchiefs they found were only five and ten cent ones. Mert never gave me loads of money. I'd ask him for small change as I have asked my father. Sometimes he gave me $25 to buy clothes with, but that wasn't often."

"There isn't an item in my entire wardrobe that is expensive, outside of my coat, for which Mert paid $240. There is a green spring suit in the Washington apartment that I spent $25 on. It is absurd for the police to give the impression that Mert pampered me with costly gowns and jewels. Truly it is a sad joke, but my jewelry, says three pieces which my father presented me as gifts, is nothing but junk—five and ten cent stuff, most of which I bought myself before I was married. There are a few trinkets that cost the munificent sum of 25 cents."

"Did give a black onyx in a white gold setting as a gift on my 18th birthday. A jade bracelet and coral locket, he wore."

"Believe me, you wouldn't hear me. I had. Sure the dresses were neat and clean and that's perhaps why the police thought they were new, but most of them weren't. I had my clothes cleaned and pressed for you have to look nice when you travel, you know."

"They found a red purse that cost $2; a black one that cost the same amount; a large purse that stood my budget $1, a grey bag which stood $5 in price; and a $2 blue bag. I had left three pairs of pajamas, two blue ones and a satin one which cost $2.50 each. Oh, yes, there was a peach skirt which I paid $1.50 for."

"They found a $2.50 negligee; a tiny bottle of perfume that was negligible in price... some cosmetics... $100 worth of cosmetics... that's absurd to contradict. There were a few pairs of shoes, but not one pair was over $6 in price. Even my underwear—the best sets—were only $5 and you know that that amount of money for underwear is dirt cheap. That to me was good."

"The grey dress I paid $15 for. It was the most I paid for any hat. I never liked flashy clothes and whatever I bought was not but not gaudy. Dad always bought me a great many clothes and most of these I had with me."

"The new frock which Norma did purchase for her yesterday because, she said, 'I have to have this blue one cleaned... I've worn it for several days in succession...' is only a $10 dress. It is an ordinary dress, except print of many colors on a background of black, bought at each shoulder with a gold clip. Full, puff sleeves slip down over the arm and are caught in a light, wide cuff band at the wrist."

Wanted Mert to

Be Proud of Her

A black turban with eye veil, fetching to Norma's particular beauty, extracted $300 from Rev. Bright's pocketbook to complete the costume."

This is the young woman who sought expert advice from New York government on how to acquire police and charm."

And Norma, questioned on this point, was quickly to admit the truth of her request and the motive behind it.

"I wanted to attain police and charm... every young girl does..."

And Norma Miller has police. Make no mistake about it. She has external police that predicated an inward calm, although the girl belied any such aspect.

"I wanted to be proud of me... I wanted to be a presentable wife for my friends... Anyhow I am a great one for answering ads and clipping ads, and that from magazines... I found that police did in one and it appealed to me, so I thought I'd inquire about it."

Please tell the public for me that I don't own any such thing as a lavish dress. I never advised Mert during the New York affair to 'give it to him' or that I ever knew of or participated in any crimes which the boys figured. Faber's sweetheart will be able to corroborate that for me. We pulled around together when we weren't with the boys... She knows... and when I wasn't with her, I was with the notorious woman in her shop, talking to her."

Rev. Bright maintained that he will shelter Norma at every turn.

Conscience Clear,

Declares Norma

He frankly admitted that his daughter had no idea that any such cloud as a possible grand jury indictment hung over her head. He thinks that her daddy will be able to shake off all the evil spirits should they present themselves now. She isn't bothered nor afraid. She says her conscience is clear and she has nothing to worry about.

Y' questioned her again about Faber's accusations, and Norma dissembles them unequivocally as lies."

She was more like a bit of china as she wistfully looked off into space, answering those questions just her and no more—no fragile, so delicate, just the kind of fortitude that a two-fisted fighter leader would want for his own to protect and hold—der h's wing.

Richmond, Va., March 2 (AP)—Six armed bandits today held up a guard of the State Bank & Trust Co. and robbed him of $60,000 in currency.

Officials said that the robbery occurred presumably while the guard, William M. Coughlin, was on his way from the Federal Reserve Bank. He was stopped at the entrance to an alley.

Traffic police on duty on busy city street nearby were unaware of the robbery until the bandit's car had sped out of the alley.

Nearby police stations and state highway patrolmen were notified immediately and a widespread hunt was begun.

Police who told that the robbery was committed by six men in a black sedan.

New Container for Dried Skim Milk

Washington, March 2 (AP)—The Department of Agriculture today announced perfection of a new container for dried skim milk.

Officials said that the new administration experts assert it will increase purity the level of diets of poor families.

The container, consisting of an outer bag of bond paper with two inner layers of transparent paper held together by a thin lining, has kept skim milk powder without deterioration for four months under ordinary conditions.

SENATE ACTION ON NEW BUDGET COMES TODAY

Senate action was awaited today on the new State budget bill, totaling $58,834,114, passed by the House with inclusion of $14,000,000 to restore all cut public salaries. An economy move by Rep. Martin Hays of Brighton, seeking to whittle down the salary boosts, especially in higher brackets, was decisively voted down. Warning Hays that Senate opposition and even a gubernatorial veto will follow too lavish appropriations was disregarded by the House. Principal flurry in the latter stage of the budget debate concerned the merits or demerits of Mr. Gen. Daniel Needham, leader of the state police. Occasion for the argument was budget item of $10,000 for training of an additional 20 members of the uniformed state force. Rep. Leo M. Birmingham of Brighton, moving to strike out the police item, praised detectives of the state police but attacked Gen. Needham as incompetent. "He knows no more about police work than an office boy in the State House," Birmingham asserted. Rep. Horace T. Cahill of Braintree, Republican titular leader of the House, quickly came to the defense of Needham. "He is no baby in swaddling clothes," he said. "He has more qualifications for the position of commissioner of that department than anyone appointed to that post." He stressed Needham's service in the army and his qualifications as a member of the bar. Needham's appointment, by Governor Ely, he said, was universally praised. Cahill praised the state detective force and said he would be glad to see it strengthened as well as Birmingham.

X-9 Agents Gayety Guests

Secret X-9 agents will attend a special show at the Gayety Theater at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning to see "SOS Iceberg" and "Ever in Love." The first picture was actually filmed in the Northland and features Rod LaRoque.

Through the courtesy of E. M. Low, members of the "Secret Agent X-9 Club" will be offered another outstanding treat tomorrow morning at the Gayety Theater at 9:30 o'clock. As a special attraction for the young and still growing army of keen-eyed sleuths, one of the pictures will be "S. O. S. Iceberg," featuring Rod LaRoque, and the other picture on this special program will star Barbara Stanwyck in "Ever in Love." Members, your admission card will be your Secret Agent X-9 badge and membership card. Simply present it at the door of the Gayety Theater, 9:30 tomorrow morning. Perhaps it would be better to arrive before 9:30, just to avoid the rush and make certain of getting a seat. Any youngster, either boy or girl, who wishes to become a full-fledged sleuth and enjoy these weekly outings may become a member very simply. Turn to the comic page of today's American and find the instructions printed there on how to join the "Secret Agent X-9 Club." The thrilling mystery strip is also on the same page.

Melrose and Lynn Get Bus Service

Bus service has been inaugurated between Melrose and Lynn via Howard and Main sts. through the efforts of residents of both Melrose and Saugus. The bus service supplements the service formerly supplied by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway, which abandoned its service a year ago.

AUSTRIA CASTS CONSTITUTION INTO DISCARD

Vienna, March 2.—For the first time since Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss shelved parliament one year ago, the government today frankly cast the constitution into the political wastebasket and let it be known it is ruling by "natural law which stands above the constitution."

The new basis of government was explained in the official gazette by Robert Hecht, an expert in constitutional law. He has advised Dollfuss on the legal aspect of each step taken since rule by emergency decrees began.

Whether the destruction of Vienna's coalitionist municipal government is strictly legal or illegal "is not of decisive importance," Hecht said.

One of the cabinet's first steps after the recent civil war was to declare null and void the position and prerogatives of anyone elected on the Reichstag ticket.

At the same time it was learned that 800 Heimwehr troops have been dispatched to Vienna and about 4000 others were sent to other points along the Vorarlberg and Tyrol frontiers.

It was further learned that the return of the exiled Hapsburgs to Austria as private citizens is still some time off.

Such a move is not likely even to take place, it was said, until it is certain that the returning former royal family would not add another disturbing factor to conditions within the country, and that such action would not "burden" Austria's foreign relations.

ROOSEVELT IN LOBBY DRIVE

Washington, March 2 (AP).—President Roosevelt today called in congressional experts to draft a bill to curb the activities of political lawyers before government departments.

Authors of proposed legislation, including Senators Vandenberg (R.), Michigan; Byrnes (D.), South Carolina; Norris (R.), Nebraska, and King (D.), Utah, were invited to the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt has called upon members of the Democratic national committee practicing law before government departments to choose between holding their political posts or continuing their legal business here.

Some of the Democratic lawyers who came to Washington last March 4 have resigned their national committee posts, including Bruce Kremen of Montana and Robert Jackson of New Hampshire. Others have not.

A number of Republican office holders also would be affected by the proposed legislation.

100 MILLION FOR BRITON PLANES

London, March 2 (INS).—Great Britain today announced her 1934 program for air defense at home and abroad, calling for creation of four new airplane squadrons in the interests of national and imperial security.

The new program calls for a gross expenditure of 20,000,000 pounds sterling (approximately $100,000,000), an increase of 27,000 pounds ($235,000) over last year. Britain will build two new squadrons for the home defense force, one new flying boat squadron for overseas work, and one new squadron for operation from aircraft carriers.

Completion of this program will bring the total strength of the Royal Air Force to 81 regular squadrons.

Gas Station Victim Points to Suspect

Ellsworth F. Hollis, 29, of 71 Elm st., Braintree, today was arraigned in Waltham court, charged with the armed robbery of a filling station at Main and Rutland sts., Waltham, on Nov. 15.

After being identified in court by Ralph Woodward, the station manager, he was held in $10,000 bail for a hearing next Friday. Judge John C. Lynch set the bail at twice the amount asked by the police when Hollis pleaded not guilty and asked for a lower figure.

Silent Death Lurks in Gun -- Made by Bandit Gang

Here is one of the guns Detective Lieut. Stokes found in Washington in the coats of the Milen-Faber gang. The weapon was ingeniously designed to silent death as it sped to the marksmen's target. The gang was hard put to get guns before the raid on the state police exhibit at the auto show. The barrel of this gun is made of a pipe, and its bullets defy identification for no barrel markings are left upon them. The frame is of the Colt woodman type. (Boston American photo.)

MOVE TO MAKE NORMA PAY IS LAUDED

Rep. Roland D. Sawyer of Warr is receiving a large number of letters, he said, today, commending him on his public stand that Norma Millen be treated with no special favors.

Typical of these communications, he said, is the following: "Your letter regarding the status of Norma Millen, is the first article containing common sense, justice and fair play that has been printed so far in all this sorry mess."

"That woman is nineteen at least; she must be that. There is so much being said about her youth and inexperience. One of the bandits is but nineteen but not much talk is being wasted on that fact."

For the well being of the youth of the land and the poor feeble efforts of parents, do all in your power to have this girl stand trial. That alone will show other girls that following her example may lead them into trouble."

"I am the mother of three girls. They are pretty and attractive. Last night I looked in their faces as they lay asleep and tried to find if they in any way resembled this girl whom every writer proclaims beautiful."

Wounded Sheriff Tells of Killing

Springfield, March 2 (AP).—Sheriff David J. Manning, still confined to a wheelchair by wounds suffered when he was shot Wednesday in Superior Court, today testified in the murder trial of Alexander Kaminiski and Paul Wargo to statements made by Kaminiski after his capture.

He said Kaminiski told him he struck Merritt W. Hayden, a jail guard, over the head three times, Oct. 22, and that Wargo took the keys from the guard. Kaminiski feared that Wargo would lose his nerve so he took the keys from Wargo and both men escaped from the lower room window, the sheriff testified.

2 DYING FROM FIRE BURNS

Springfield, March 2.—Awakened from sleep by flames that swept their house today, five persons battled their way out with difficulty and two of them were seriously burned.

Cornelius Lahey, 74, and his son-in-law, George Rowen, were badly burned, as they delayed leaving the blazing structure until they had seen the other three occupants, all women, were safely out.

The fire spread with such rapidity that the rooms they had been occupying were roaring furnaces almost as soon as the people reached the street. The whole house was a mass of flames when firemen arrived.

you want them mild

SOME folks like their tea or coffee strong enough to hold up a house . . . and maybe that's all right.

But most smokers, we find, like a mild cigarette. That may be because people smoke more nowadays. Or perhaps they've found that in a milder cigarette like Chesterfield they get more of the aroma and taste.

Milder doesn't mean namby-pamby. To Chesterfield smokers it means a cigarette that's mild and yet satisfies.

Dickens and His Daughters

Charles Dickens, famous English author, whose story, "The Life of Our Lord," starts in the Boston Evening American next Monday, is shown in this old family picture.

Disclosure, 64 years after his death, that Charles Dickens had left a 14,000 word manuscript written expressly for his children and never published in English letters, it was declared today by John C. Eckel of Philadelphia, one of the leading Dickens experts in the country.

The simple story written by Dickens for his children, "The Life of Our Lord," will begin next Monday in the Boston Evening American—a work written at the peak of his power as a great craftsman.

"Never was an important literary secret as perfectly kept as this one," said the distinguished Dickinson, "and this feature is of added interest attaching to the his subjects—there are 30,000,000 of them, no small crowd—to study modern methods and forget some ancient ones, did away with an old rule, and omitted the "kneeling" that would have compelled all entering the sacred imperial presence to kneel and press their foreheads on the ground.

That oriental custom, based on the belief that the divine emperor is everything, and even the greatest of his subjects nothing, is well described in a few words by Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth in her book, "Crowded Hours," published by Scribners.

Mrs. Longworth was taken to the Forbidden City and the imperial gardens to see the Chinese dowager empress, a haughty, severe old lady, because she, then Miss Roosevelt, was the daughter of Theodore Roosevelt, ruler of a great nation. She was carried through the imperial gardens, as was the empress, sitting in a golden chair, borne on men's shoulders. As the two ladies talked, the well known Chinese diplomat, Wu Ting Fang, translated.

SPURIOUS BILL PLANT SOUGHT

Secret service agents left Boston for Worcester and adjoining cities at noon today on a tip that they lead to the hideout of a counterfeit plant where bogus $5, $10 and $20 bills are printed and put in circulation.

The operators are said to have been driven from New York recently and decided to carry on their business in Massachusetts. One trail leads to Springfield and another to Shrewsbury, it was learned.

The investigators are headed by Secret Service Agent "Al" McCormack. Police are cooperating. Arrests are expected late tonight. Storekeepers in and near Boston and in other sections of the State have had spurious $5 bills palmed off on them recently in exchange for merchandise.

9 Die, 15 Doomed by Poison Fungi

San Luis Obispo, Cal., March 2 (U.S.)—With the steadily mounting toll of dead at nine, County Physician E. Hulse Smith declared all of the surviving 15 men who ate poisonous toadstools at a "mushroom dinner" are doomed. Death is regarded as inescapable and plans already have been made for a mass funeral for 22 Filipino lettuce pickers. The Filipinos gathered what they thought were mushrooms and gave a special dinner to their American employer and his brother.

Gas of Suicide Auto Kills Wife

Weed, Calif., March 2—By his own act of self-destruction, E. M. Noble unintentionally brought death to his wife, Mrs. Noble never learned her husband had taken his life, Mrs. Muriel C. Upton, deputy coroner, said. Noble's body was found in his automobile grazing a house connected with the exhaust of the engine. The engine is an explosion of the house where the body of Mrs. Noble was found. Although the door between the engine and the house was closed, flames leaked through cracks and keyhole.

Malden Hospital Will Seek Funds

Trustees of the Malden hospital announced today that they would endeavor to raise for a fund of $100,000 for operation and maintenance of the new hospital building.

plant was completed two years ago. Income was reported sufficient to maintain it. General business conditions has decreased the income so additional funds are required.

Intelligent Chinese of high rank had been an important person, telling us what he thought we ought to do, criticizing frankly. In the garden of the old emperor, he was no more than an ant in the dust of the path or a worm burrowing in the soil.

This is how Mrs. Longworth describes what happened:

"He (Wu Ting Fang) stood between us, a little to the side, but suddenly, as the conversation was going on, the Empress said something in a small, savage voice, whereat he turned quite gray and got down on all fours, his forehead touching the ground."

The Empress would speak; he would lift his head and say it in English to me: back would go his forehead to the ground while I spoke; he would come his head again while he said it in Chinese to the Empress; then back to the ground would go his forehead again. There was no clue to her reason for humiliating him before us.

"When I told father about it he thought it might have been to show us that this man whom we accepted as an equal was to her no more than something to put her foot on—that it was a way of indicating that none of us, either, amounted to much more than that in her opinion."

The late Charles A. Lindbergh, father of the flier, and a Congressman from Minnesota, wrote a book, entitled: "Your Country at War," while the big war was going on 16 years ago. Agents of the national government raided the plant in Washington where the book was printed, destroyed the plates, seized all available copies.

Congressman Lindbergh asked the question:

"Why is your country at war?"

And answered it:

"Because of the domination of special privilege."

That was considered unpatriotic.

The book is republished now with no objection by the government. The former law partner of the Senator Lindbergh points out that the book outlines and foretold, as necessary, a plan much like NRA. It will be called a mild book now. The extreme radicalism of one day is the semi-conservatism of another.

ANTICIPATION OF VIEWING paintings of summer parades gave wing to our feet yesterday afternoon as we hurried to the Boston Art Club which marked the opening of an exhibition of paintings and sculptures by women artists of New England with a private view and tea... the distinct atmosphere of culture which always identifies the Boston Art Club and the peace and quiet with which one may enjoy the exhibits makes it a particularly inviting gallery in comparison to the feverish crush of some of the smaller exhibits in town...

ROSAMOND MUSGRAVE

Mrs. Marjorie Slocum was a distinguished artist present... her oil painting, "The Cove," receiving much admiration and her presence as a pourer lent grace and dignity to the tea table...

... She was greeted for the occasion in olive green with brown accessories... Ann B. Frothingham, attired in brown with fur trimming and a tiny beret of the same warm hue exhibited a painting of Gloucester fishing boats which caught the spirit of that picturesque port to perfection...

Other names familiar in social circles here, Elizabeth Salmonell and Rosamond Musgrave, are to be found on the roster of exhibitors, and a portrait of Mrs. James B. Thayer by Almer Lamb and loaned by the Children Club, attracted many spectators...

Mrs. Elizabeth Oakie Paxton was invited to pour... a very pretty lady, she made a charming picture as she presided over the tea table... with her brown suit she wore a salmon-colored blouse and brown hat...

Miss Katherine Wilkins in Red
A BRIGHT SPOT AMONG THE admiring and appreciative group, Miss Katherine Wilkins was seen in earnest conversation with Mr. Albert E. Brown, an English sculptor... Miss Wilkins' gay red dress was scarfed with red Scotch plaid...

Mrs. Earl Beasey, in black, Mrs. S. S. Widger, who makes her home at the Beaconsfield, in mauve, Mrs. Danforth Page, also a pourer, who wore a large brimmed hat with her brown dress, and Miss Dorothy Whittier with a leopard coat revealing a brick red dress underneath, were others teeing...

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Tweed to Mr. Nelson Aldrich is slated for June after the bridegroom-to-be receives his sheepskin from Harvard... The bride and her groom will go abroad where they will have an apartment in Paris while Mr. Aldrich studies architecture at the Beaux Arts... he is following in the footsteps of his well known father, Mr. William T. Aldrich...

Mrs. Tweed is the daughter of Mr. Harrison Tweed of New York who made the announcement of the engagement in December...

A Mediterranean cruise is the immediate and happy outlook for Mrs. E. Fred Collier and the three charming young daughters who are sailing next week...

Dinners for Bridal Attendants
A STAG DINNER FOR JOHN DINSMOOR and his ushers and a dinner for the maids who will surround his bride-to-be, were two outstanding events of last evening... The guests at the stag dinner were A. Eliot Ritchie, Jr., who will be best man at Mr. Dinsmoor's marriage on Saturday; to Miss Elizabeth Mitchell, Horace Partridge, Thomas Burdick, Shedd Vandenberg, Donald Cadz, Henry Mitchell and Robert Mitchell, ushers...

Miss Catherine Brown and Miss Marion Duane, both bridesmaids, gave the dinner for the bride at the home of Miss Brown on Dean rd., Brookline... Miss C. Elizabeth Balts of Philadelphia, who is slated to be the bride, Mrs. Horace Partridge and Miss Carolyn Day, also bridesmaids, were their guests...

Mrs. Russell Codman of Marlborough is, giving a luncheon on Saturday before the lecture of Lillian Frances Franchise group of Boston and Cambridge at 3:30... Mr. Louis Casamian will speak in French on impressions of a hiker in New England... On Saturday, the 17th of March, M. Jean-Paul Freyass will be the speaker.

Busy Day at Thrift Shop
AT THE THRIFT SHOP open house yesterday afternoon in the interests of the New England Medical Center, Mrs. Otis Weld Richardson, smocked in bright blue, was being deluged with bundles, the admission price to the tea, and exclaiming at the marvelous contributions which the day had brought...

... Miss Harriet Moseley poured behind a huge cluster of yellow daffodils and among those who browsed around between old Greek dictionaries and the most modern of tiaras, were Mrs. Frances Moulton, Mrs. Phineas Sprague, Mrs. Henry Sawyer, Mrs. Randolph K. Byers and Mrs. William King...

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Woods of Hamilton, are rejoicing over the birth yesterday at the Wyman House of their first son... Mrs. Woods is the former Betty Barrell, daughter of Mrs. Augustus Goodwin of Hamilton...

Bostonians at Pinehurst
The season at Pinehurst is well under way and during the past few days a large number of Boston visitors have been following the progress of the annual spring golf tourneys. Next week the annual championships of the Tin Whistles and Silver Pails Golf Clubs will be decided and more Bostonians are expected to witness these events...

Recent arrivals from this city at the North Carolina resort include Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kimball, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott James of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davis of New York, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Lloyd of Cambridge and Mr. Russell H. Leonard.

EPIC PHOTOGRAPHS THE WORLD REMEMBERS

PICTURE PARADE

PICTURES YOU WILL WANT FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK

THE ANCIENTS RE-FUEL!

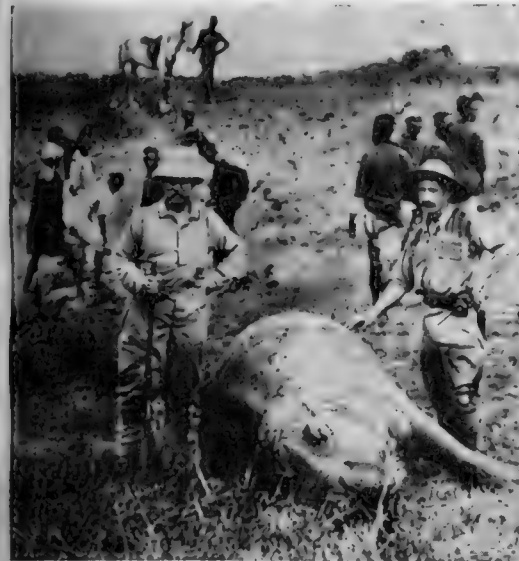

On June 25, 1905, a Hooker Day celebration was held in Boston and the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co. joined with Civil War veterans in honoring the memory of the noted general. The parade took four hours to pass a given point and then the marchers assembled on Boston Common. No wonder they were hungry! You see here a group of the Ancients trying to make peace with the inner man with sandwiches and pop. And the inner man needed a lot of making peace. In the picture, Charles Porter of Porter's Market is on the left, laying down a heavy molar barrage on the foodstuffs. (Photo by T. E. Marr & Son.)

HERO WANTED!—You and I, and the guy next door, thrilled a-plenty at such a scene as this when the first movies began to flicker on the screens of the land. Of course you knew that the "thundering express" would whisk into that switch at the nick of time, but your blood kind of froze just the same. The hero in this early movie shot is a bit late for work. You're in my power-r-r-r! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! (International News Photos.)

BIG STICK RESTS!—To his African guides of the memorable hunting trip of 1909, Col. Theodore Roosevelt was known as "Bwana Tembo," which means "Big Chief" or "Mighty Hunter," whichever way you happen to be feeling. The former President, completing a term in the White House, laid aside his big stick, picked up a big rifle and bled himself to Africa, with his son, Kermit, where they knocked off big game with the same verve and celebrity the ex-chief executive had utilized in knocking off big malefactors and members of the "Ananias Club." (International News Photos.)

WE KNOW YOU AL!—Believe it or not, this is Alfred E. Smith, standing just off, but not on, the sidewalks of New York, with his first brown derby at arm's reach—when the former governor and presidential candidate, was 21 years old. Even at that age he was in politics. (Photo from D. Green, 92 Wayland st., Dorchester.)

BAD BOY BENITO!—"Il Duce" here is very ill, but Mussolini wasn't always the power in Italy that he is today. Back in 1915 he was just another Italian citizen who spoke right out in class in a harsh vein that

TILLIE'S TORRID TEMPO!

Old Nick was believed to be just around the corner in 1870 when the "breath-taking" woman was imported from Paris, and the more daring of the ladies began to switch on a experimental hip here and there to the hot-chest tones of— you'd never guess. Ho! fenbach! No wonder the sale of reinvigorating, cooling ale was so heavy in the music halls. Notice that display of lambing on the cute patios. (International News Photos.)

ONE IN SEVEN TO LOSE JOBS ON CWA WORK

New Slashes in Working Roll Loom, Officials Declare

One worker in every seven will be removed from CWA payroll throughout the State today as orders from Washington to bring the Massachusetts quota down to 90,000. This marks the second sharp cut in the Massachusetts CWA personnel, the first coming last Feb. 23 when 10,000 workers throughout the State were removed from various projects.

NEW CUT LOOMS

State CWA officials, who made every effort possible to avert the second sharp slash, attempted regretfully that their attempts had failed. They pointed out, however, that the quota, which must be reached today, is actually 1000 more than the total quota of 91,000 originally assigned to Massachusetts.

The slash was said to be another step in the plan to completely demobilize the CWA by May 1. It was said that subsequent cuts will be effected by dropping least desirable projects, including some State and county work, in order to avert the hardship in cities and towns where there is little possibility of obtaining other work.

Unlike last week's order, the present slash will include the cutting of civil works service projects, on which over 11,000 women are employed.

WOMEN TO STAY ON

Women enroute on the unemployment census project, however, will not be affected by the cut. It is expected that enough women will be used to determine those to be discharged with final CWA administrative action, the final judgment in the matter. Those with other resources or with other members of the family employed will be discharged first.

$892,389 PAID CWA WOMEN

Almost 500,000 garments made by Massachusetts women, working under the federal emergency relief plan, it was revealed today in a report by John T. Reilly, federal director for the State.

More than $150,000 was spent on materials, and the payroll, up to February 15, totaled $892,389, according to the report.

The work is being done by small groups of women in all parts of the State. They make, amongst other things, bedding, children's dresses, skirts and coats, men's shirts, pants and lumber-jackets, underwear, layettes, towels, aprons, handkerchiefs and hospital supplies.

The products are distributed to needy families by the local boards in the cities and towns in which the work units are located.

CWA Worker on Probation for Drinking With Women

William V. Burke of Malden, a CWA worker, not only spent his money for liquor, but was found by his wife at a Malden beer parlor at the table with two women for whom he was buying the drinks, Mrs. Burke told Judge Elbridge G. Davis in Malden district court.

"It is hard enough to have no money with which to support a family and the children, but when he is spending it for drinks for other women and we go hungry, it is going too far," Mrs. Burke declared.

Judge Davis agreed with her. Burke, asked what he had to say, declared he had happened to sit down to a table where two women were drinking when his wife walked in.

Burke was given probation for 15 months with a suspended sentence to the state farm. He must turn in his earnings toward his family's support.

Thousands Declared Victims of Furniture Club Fraud

Out of what Middlesex County authorities allege to have been a quiet swindling of housewives throughout New England, covering a period of years, two Providence men were arraigned today in Middlesex Superior Court, and nine other men and a woman were under arrest.

All were secretly indicted by the Middlesex County Grand Jury on charges of conspiracy to steal and conspiracy to defraud through a declared "furniture club plan," sponsored by the Jackson Furniture Co., with stores in Boston, New Bedford, Providence, and Newport, R.I.

Arraigned today on indictment were Benjamin Levin of Sargent ave., and Charles J. Senter of Sumner st., both in Providence. They were held in $2000 each by Judge Russell H. Brandreth for trial.

PRESIDENT HELD

Those under arrest on indictment warrants, according to Asst. Dist. Atty. Frank G. Volpe, of Middlesex county, are Henry Lazarus, 41, president of the Jackson Furniture Co.; William Blake, 48, of Providence, a salesman; Samuel Strassheim, 41, of Providence, a salesman; Atty. Joseph J. Jurman, declared co-conspirator for the company; Darrell C. Hamilton of Lawrence, and his wife; Stephen Glavin and Philip Golden and Philip Lavian, all of Boston, and Herman Kaplan of Malden.

Atty. Jurman was arrested, according to the Middlesex prosecutor, in the Jackson store in Washington St. Lazarus, Blake and Strassheim were arrested in Providence and Kaplan was arrested somewhere in Maine.

According to the charges, the furniture club plan has been sponsored for years throughout New England, with an average "take" of $14 from each housewife concerned, and the allegation is that thousands of housewives, some of them the wives of judges, lawyers, business and industrial leaders have been swindled.

BARGAIN OFFERED

According to Volpe, the company in sales and offering private inducements to some of the women in the organization to lend their names to the arrangement.

In each city or town, the club members were to agree to pay $2 a week into the club fund, and when the fund reached $1000, the member was eligible to select a "choice $250 set" of furniture and furnishings, declared to be a bargain at the price. The balance would be paid over a 50 cent a week basis.

He charged, however, that the goods, obtained upon the women, were much inferior in quality, and that the women were swindled in their offices an advertised "choice $250 set" of furniture and furnishings experts as worth not more than $150, even when sold at retail on the installment plan.

WINTHROP DOG PUZZLE GROWS

Chicago, March 2—The mystery of the snatching of Kid Boots Ace, 13-pound champion Boston terrier—grows deeper.

The owner, Louis Rudginsky, left for his home in Winthrop, Mass. last night, discouraged and "all in," and still willing to pay—something. Shortly after his departure, a friend here reported to police he had received a telephone call from New York stating the animal was being shipped to Mrs. Rudginsky in Winthrop and that she had been notified. She said she had been traveling so much that she had not received the call just after he had declared winner in a show here last Sunday night.

Rudginsky reported demands over telephone for a $250 ransom.

Thief Chokes Boy and Steals His $2

A police are looking for the thief who stole $2 from George Langley, 13, of Oregon st., Roxbury, just as the boy was entering a store on Tremont st., Roxbury. The boy said the thief grabbed the money from him by the throat and then took the money from his pocket.

Two large contributions were added today to the Emergency Campaign fund.

It is the 11th of a series of appeals for the Department of Justice, a federal court today.

He was today at the trial of John P. Connelley, Jr., father and son of 15th st., Fall River, charged with assault and battery on a government official.

Norton, connected with the Alcoholic Beverage Unit of the Department of Justice, testified he and other agents went to the home of the defendants Feb. 21, 1933, in search of contraband liquor. He said he entered the kitchen and Connelley's son attacked him. Connelley himself then grabbed Norton by the neck.

HEART YIELDS TO STRAIN OF TWO CHARGES

Stolkier Is Accused of Killing Bride, Abusing Stepdughter.

Andrew E. Stolkier, Somerville window-cleaner, compound murderer, held for wife murder and a stepdaughter's murder in East Cambridge police court today in a verdict apparently a verdict of heart failure.

Discovery of Stolkier's lifeless body, with a blanket pulled up around his face, gave jail officials a shock, their first belief being that he had committed suicide rather than face the charges against him.

A jail guard making the rounds in a breakfast awakening of the prisoners received no response from Stolkier and the guard entered the cell and shook him.

When there was no response, the frightened guard summoned acting Sheriff Joseph M. McElroy of Middlesex county.

The medical examiner, Dr. David A. Dow, was called, and after examining the body said that the prisoner had died of a heart attack.

Stolkier yesterday was held in a former wife in New York City 15 years ago, had been married by Middlesex County authorities.

The possible former wife is Mrs. Mary Stolkier, 48, of Faywood street, Boston. She appeared at Somerville police court today, where Stolkier had been arraigned on the murder charges in Somerville court yesterday.

The elderly woman told police she had seen a newspaper picture of Stolkier and that it looked like the man who deserted her 15 years ago and from whom, as far as she knew, she was divorced.

She was taken to East Cambridge jail and Stolkier was placed in a line with other prisoners. She was unable to pick him out, she said, but later, when he was pointed out to her, she said she was not certain that he was the man.

MISSING IN YEARS

She told officials she had not seen him for 15 years and that his appearance might have changed in the time, she suggested that she be allowed to talk with him, feeling that she might be able to hear his voice. This was not possible at the time, but authorities believe such a thing is possible.

She told police the man she married was named Edward Blalock, but that he was also known as Andy.

RECORD INCOME TAX LOOMS

All tax collecting records in Massachusetts were shattered as a result of the arrival of $100,000 into the coffers of the Commonwealth.

A throng of 7500 persons visited the collecting offices in Court st. yesterday, where a force of 400 clerks were kept busy up to the limit.

Tax Commr. Long estimated the state will receive about $100,000 in income taxes this year. He explained the large amount received thus far by stating that it had paid their taxes in full instead of waiting to make two payments as the law allows.

The literary find of a century!

Charles Dickens

Now.... AFTER 85 YEARS YOU can read in this newspaper the ONLY UNPUBLISHED work of CHARLES DICKENS

the world's best loved novelist

"The LIFE of OUR LORD"

WRITTEN SOLELY FOR HIS OWN CHILDREN

Dickens wrote this exquisitely intimate work only for his children. During his lifetime he refused to have it published. For 85 years his children jealously guarded this work of Dickens from the public. Now, with the death of Sir Henry Dickens, the last child, this widely discussed and eagerly awaited story is given the world.

The gigantic sum of more than $200,000—the greatest price ever paid for publication rights—indicates the importance that the publishing world attaches to this unpublished manuscript, cloaked by 85 years of mystery.

Inspired by his deep love for his children, and knowing the influence that such a simple narrative as "The Life of Our Lord" would exercise on their spiritual guidance, Dickens poured into this work all the profound artistry of his soul. Read it yourself—read it to your children. It is the world's greatest story, told by the world's best beloved novelist.

Today this is the most surprising manuscript in English literature ... eagerly awaited by the world since 1849. More than $200,000 was paid for the right to print it... $15 a word... the highest price ever paid for any literary work! And it is yours with this newspaper... not an added penny to pay.

CITY SCHOOLS FIGHT FOR HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIP AT ARENA

ENGLISH, LATIN LEAD IN RACE FOR TITLE

By Bill Connell

Courageous Boston schoolboys, deprived of hockey this year because of the skeleton budget for sports, still through the final games of their independent campaigns when English duels Latin, and Commerce plays Dorchester at the Arena tonight.

The English group leads in the season play with six points. Latin, one point back, can snatch the crown tonight with a victory. Lacking funds, these teams sold tickets to students of their schools, and managed to pay their way. The four teams developed several outstanding players, including goalie Paul Moore of Latin, "Red" Gill of English, Sid Hestory of Commerce, and Mike Dardinski of Dorchester.

The major item of today's school sports was the opening of the first annual Catholic High school tournament at St. Mary's Hall in Cambridge, near Central st. Cathedral of Boston was ready to back it. St. Joseph of Rutland, Vt., in the opener at 4 o'clock, with Mary Coyle High of Taunton facing St. John of Concord, N. H., at 5 o'clock.

Games this evening pair Our Lady High of Newton and St. John of Worcester at 8 p. m., with St. Michael's of Northampton playing Keith Academy in the windup. Semifinals match today four victors tomorrow afternoon. With the gala finale and a consolation game for the runner-up semifinalists tomorrow night.

Nash Named Official of Rifle Body

Washington, D. C., March 2.—Election of Lieut. Col. Nathan C. Nash, Jr., 353 Exchange Building, Boston, as third vice-president of the National Rifle Association, which has its headquarters here, has been announced by the secretary of the association.

The executive committee of the association, of which Col. Nash is a member, has decided to open its 1934 national rifle-power rifle championship matches to other rifle clubs, rather than to military rifle clubs, which have been the only ones heretofore. The committee has also eliminated the East vs. West competition in the national small-bore rifle tournaments.

Garden City Course Each Green Presents Reflects Genius of Individual Problem to Seekers of Par

By Nan O'Reilly

The Garden City Golf Club—Walter J. Travis. The two are synonymous; but the famous course has stood the test of time, and the "man with the big black eyes" is only a legend. Yet, for eleven years he has worked as chairman of the green committee, day and night, tending the greens with the tenderness of a mother, shaping and fostering the British aspects of the layout, chucking sarcastically when some so-called champion scored into the 80's.

Today the course reflects the genius of Walter J. and is an outstanding example of British construction in America. It's a layout that gets better each time it is played—and also harder. It has character, plenty of it. The club has atmosphere and is steeped in tradition. It maintains a dignity that has for more than a quarter of a century set a standard for golf in this country.

Garden City is the home of a thousand legends. Great championships have been played there; history has been made. Walter J. won his amateur crown most appropriately on his own beloved fairways here he twisted John Bull's tail a few years later.

Eleventh Hole a Trouble-Maker
In 1902 the professionals battled for honors in the national open, and Lawrence Auchterloun won with the surprisingly low total of 87; and two of Jerry Travis' four amateur championships were chalked up on Garden City's greens, his first and his last. It's difficult to say any one hole is better than another at Garden City; they are all good. The sixth is a fine example of a two-shotter that lives up to its length: It can be a drive and No. 2 or a full brain, depending on the wind.

The eleventh is another that causes plenty of trouble—but here the daring golfer gets his reward if he carries the long way across a series of sand traps which open up the hole. The eighth carry, if left alone, leaves a blind shot to the green, and anything can happen. No golfer ever breathes a sigh of relief at Garden City until he has holed out at the 12th. It's a short affair, but how the scores add up there! To begin with, there's a deep trap running entirely across the front of the green.

Course in a Class by Itself
Here mounds form a horsehoe construction on the green, and if the tee shot goes beyond or to the side of the mounds, the player is faced with the most difficult shot imaginable on a lightning-fast green. It's no disgrace to four-putt this hole once you are "mounded" on the green. The entire course is flat—yet never gives a feeling of flatness. The greens all lend themselves to the pitch-and-run game. There's plenty of loach and perfect turf conditions, almost unexcelled in this country. Each green is an individual problem.

As a golf course, Garden City is in a class by itself. It's the goal of every visitor to the big city, although the clubhouse is just a rambling affair with no pretenses or showy aspects. Like those two other great courses, Pine Valley and Burning Tree, it is strictly a man's playground; only once in a while do the members unbend so far as to permit a woman to sit on the famous porch.

(This is the fifth of a series of feature articles on "Great Golf Courses." The sixth will appear tomorrow.)

TONING DOWN OF EXCHANGE BILL EXPECTED

Reassuring Note From President Would Hearten Leaders

By B. C. FORBES

Towards the top the impression is spreading that President Roosevelt favors modifying some legislation strongly objected by business and financial leaders.

That they under-stand" the more dramatic features of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill aimed at stock exchanges, will men realize it. A reassuring declaration from the chief executive would, it is reasoned, not only have a salutary effect upon certain bureaucrats, but would hearten business men who badly need heartening from Washington.

Honest business men—and there are honest business men—feel that they are suffering from the conduct of dishonest business men—

If President Roosevelt felt warranted in explaining lucidly to the public the vital part business and industry must play in bringing about better times, the effect unquestionably would be extremely

Cotton Higher in New York Market

New York, March 2 (INS)—The recovery movement in cotton futures was extended 50 cents a bale today as speculative quarters took cotton out of the ring on reports the House committee on agriculture would report favorably on the Bankhead bill.

Futures were up 9 to 13 points, with May up 12 at 91 1/2; July up 10 at 122 1/2; October 9 up at 123.8, and December up 10 at 125 1/2.

MEMOIRS OF MR. FRISBY

By Horace Walpole Frisby

(Paintings of Mr. Frisby as a boy, which were made in the kitchen of the "Blind")

A robot that "tells the autobiographer, or Memoirs Manager, is to answer the question on everybody's lips: When was you born? I have thumbed the birth records of many cities through the long days and endless nights, as my mother never told me the date of my birth (there I go crying again) and I cannot seem to get any where. But when a writing out a hot towel in witchazel and put it over my eyes, I can recall my boyhood days, which abounded with daring and mischievous exploits. In those days I delighted to stand upon a railroad track and stick out my tongue at the engineer of the oncoming train, as he frantically jerked the whistle cord, warning me to clear the way. I would tantalizingly refuse to heed the blast until the engine was almost upon me. Then I would hop nimbly to one side, which was a great joke on the engineer. I always felt he would like to stop the train and chase me across the open fields, but I was too quick for him.
